

JEWISH JOURNAL

Summer Internship 2017

“At the Jewish Journal I had the chance to grow as a news and feature writer (the task of compiling obituaries was taken away from me within the first week after they realized how much I could contribute to the paper). I had the opportunity to interview LA Laker Jordan Farmar about his philanthropic work, write about Muslim-Jewish interfaith dialogues, cover the swine flu outbreak, and write about numerous other issues that went on around the community. I was also sent to Moldova and Ukraine at the summer’s end to cover the resurgence of Jewish education in the former Soviet Union. This summer (was an) incredible journey” ~ Laura Stampler, Rebele Intern

TRIBE Media Corp., which publishes The Jewish Journal of Greater Los Angeles, jewishjournal.com, TRIBE magazine and Jewish Journal City Guide, is currently accepting resumes for editorial internships positions at our L.A. office.

Requirements:

- Solid reporting and writing skills
- Prior coursework in journalism or related experience with a student publication
- Basic digital photography and videography skills
- Ability to work nights or weekends as needed

Responsibilities:

- Report and write breaking news and feature articles for the Web and print publications, both short and long-form

Internships are full-time (40 hrs per week) for 12 weeks. Interns are paid a $500 stipend for the internship and are also eligible to receive a Rebele stipend of up $5,000.

Please submit cover letter, resume and clips to:
Susan Freudenheim, Executive Editor ~ susanf@jewishjournal.com
(Put “INTERN” in the subject line.)

Summer Application Deadline April 1, 2017