Summer, Lake Tahoe, and a Journalism Job

It doesn't get much better!

Moonshine Ink, Tahoe-Truckee's independent newspaper, is looking for interns with solid writing and reporting skills, a can-do attitude, and the desire to be part of a team that's setting the standard for community journalism.

We are a small and dynamic group of writers and editors with an office in downtown Truckee and a reader base that extends from Nevada to the Sierra foothills and the Bay Area. Our monthly print edition is supplemented by a fluid online edition: moonshineink.com.

Our stories cover the breadth and depth of life in Tahoe. From Burning Man to the politics of development and from hard-hitting investigative pieces to sports features, we offer readers the best insights on the arts, the environment, sports, mountain life, and local government. We encourage applicants to spend time on our website and approach us with thoughts on what we're doing well and what we could be doing better.

Interns work closely with our team of editors, getting hands-on experience in print and online newspaper publishing. The internship would also offer an aspiring journalist the opportunity to develop his or her own story lines, which can run the gambit from classic mountain sports to arts, education, health, and public welfare.

Interested applicants should send a resume and a cover letter addressing their specific interest in working for Moonshine Ink to publisher Mayumi Elegado, mayumi@moonshineink.com. Please include three recent writing samples, at no more than 700 words per piece.

Internship includes a $500 stipend. Stanford students are eligible to receive Rebele funding of up to $5,000.

Summer Rebele Application Deadline: 1 April 2015
