

Description of position:

SFGate.com is searching for web production interns for Summer 2017 (May/June through August/September). The interns will work with our web producer team to assist in the day-to-day maintenance of SFGate and production of content in all areas, including news, sports, real estate, entertainment, travel, and more. The position is unpaid.

Although SFGate.com is part of the same organization as the San Francisco Chronicle, this is NOT a traditional newspaper internship and will not focus on traditional newsroom reporting and writing skills. This internship focuses on the day-to-day operations of web production.

Key responsibilities of the internship include:

- assisting with production of content such as regularly scheduled photo galleries
- posting for SFGate's social media accounts, or assisting with larger social media projects
- creating and executing original ideas for photo galleries
- finding trending web topics that should be covered and writing blog posts

If a candidate has a particular interest in a certain area, we are open to tailoring some work around that interest.

Experience required:

The successful candidate will have familiarity with online publications and have great energy and attention to detail. Familiarity with Twitter and Facebook posting is desirable. Familiarity with WordPress and other web tools is a strong plus, but we can train you on any of our tools.

How to apply:

If you're interested in this internship and are able to receive course credit, please send us your resume via email to interns@sfgate.com along with a brief description about yourself and a sample of your writing. In addition to anything you want to highlight about your fit for the internship, we're interested in knowing about your personal areas of interest (such as cooking, politics, watching professional sports, etc) and any ideas you have about your future career. Thanks for the interest in SFGate!
