

INTERNSHIP

JOURNALISTS WANTED

We take journalism seriously, but not so seriously that we let ourselves be guided by an agenda. In fact, we cherish our political independence: We've taken on the powerful unions that helped elect the leftist majority on the Board of Supervisors and the downtown business interests that financed the campaigns of former Mayor Gavin Newsom.

We're looking for interns who have some news writing experience (school newspapers count) and are eager to tackle any story challenge — whether it be a source who isn't returning your phone call or trying to find an interesting angle to general news story. We encourage interns to pitch stories, take photos, and write pieces of varying lengths for print and the blogs (news, music, food, and arts & entertainment).

Please send your resume, cover letter, and clips to Mollie McWilliams at Mollie.McWilliams@SFWeekly.com.

DEADLINE: APRIL 1, 2015
