

Mountain View VOICE

JOURNALISM INTERNSHIPS

“My time at the Voice...my first professional newspaper internship...was eye-opening: I saw how a small community newspaper had to stay on task and cater to a niche that no one else was covering. I felt very welcome from the start and was put to work writing human interest stories and monitoring the crime beat. I was excited to step into a real working environment. A highlight was doing Voices on the Street, where I'd hit the streets in downtown Mountain View to gather the opinions of passersby on a news topic of the week. It was both nerve-wracking and hilarious, and I loved the challenge of speaking to strangers and the spontaneity of every encounter. (It) has been an incredible experience.”

~ Ellen Huet, staff writer at Forbes, former San Francisco Chronicle reporter and Rebele intern

“I spent 10 rigorous weeks getting to know the people and places of Mountain View under the guidance of a wonderful editor and in the company of friendly and talented staff. I participated in weekly editorial meetings, pitching ideas and helping to guide the direction of the paper each issue...I felt as if I were an integral part of the paper from the start. The intimacy of the Voice allowed me to participate fully (and) I appreciated the opportunities that the small weekly paper afforded...making my summer productive, educational, and memorable.” ~ Kelsey Mesher, Rebele intern

The Mountain View Voice is looking for talented, committed interns.

The Voice, 2018 winner of the California Newspaper Publishers Association's prestigious General Excellence award, is Mountain View's most trusted source for local news.

Newsroom interns work side-by-side with reporters, writing news, features and crime stories. Photojournalism interns work closely with our staff photographer, shooting a broad range of assignments and editing on deadline.

Summer internships of up to 35 hours/week are unpaid, but eligible for a Rebele Internship Program stipend of up to $7,200. Fall, winter and spring internships of up to 15 hours/week are also eligible for stipends.
